

The important thing to remember is that you have started the process and the more people involved the easier and more inclusive it will become, the process is a journey both of self realisation when understanding our own unconscious bias and of working together to find solutions for our work spaces.

Thank you for being part of this design process and we hope you have discovered valuable tools to use in the next stage of your commitment to ensuring a more inclusive work space.